THE SOLDIER'S SON.

It was at a flerce and critical period of the war in the Peninsula, that General Morillo, then commanding a Spanish army, about 4,000 strong, passed down the Portuguese frontier to the lower Guardiana, intending to fall on seville as soon as Marshal Soult should dvance to the succor of Badajoy. In the beginning of April, while the French wei'edisheartened by the sudden news of the fall of that city, Morille, issuing out the fall of that city, Morillo, Issuing out of Portugal, crossed the lower Guardiana and marched toward Seville.

But the hopes of the Spaniards of heins speedily in possession of Seville were cut off by a piece of deceit. False information, adroitly given by a Spaniard in the French interest, led Morillo to believe that Soult was close at hand, whereupon he immediately retired to Gibraleau.

The disappointment and failure in the execution of a favortic project, cherished for many months, irritated beyond control the naturally severe temper of General Morillo.

It was evening, and the division of the army under him were encamped some hours' march on their retreat. Preparations might have been seen for a military execution; a couple of French prisoners captured in the last skirmish were, according to the cruel practice of many chiefs in those times, to be put to death. The captives were guarded by a file of soldiers, and the executioners, waiting the word of command to draw up, were leaning on their weapons and talking of the events of the last two days.

Inst then, one of the infector offects.

talking of the events of the last two days.

Just then, one of the inferior officers returning to his tent, after giving some orders to the inen, was interruped by a boy, apparently ten years of age, who seizing his hand and speaking in an accent slightly foreign, besought him, with pitcous entreaties, to procure him admittance to the general. The officer found, on inquiry, that he was the son of one of the prisoners, a solder distinguished for his eminent personal bravery, who had not been taken, even when overwhelmed by numbers, without giving and receiving many severe wounds.

This soldier, wearied and wounded, giving and receiving many severe wounds.

This soldier, wearied and wounded, but invincible in courage and spirit, scorned to ask clemency of his conqueror, and was now to suffer death with his companions in misfortune. The terrible order had been given, for Morillo would not be impeded in his march by prisoners, and he so hated the French that the bravest and most generous among them would have found no mercy at his hands. The prisoner's little son, refusing to be separated from his father, had been suffered by the Spaniards to follow him.

"You shall see the general, boy, since you wish it," said the officer in reply to the child's passionate entreaties; "but he will not grant your father's life. San Lucas! but these French dogs have given us too much trouble already."

They entered the general's tent. Morillo, by the light of a lamp burning on the table, was reading a dispatch that he had just received. Two of his officers stood next him; there was no one else in the tent. The brow of the chief was contracted, and his eyes flashed as if what he read was displeasing to him; he looked up with an impatient exclamation as the officer entered with the boy. The child, as soon as Morillo was pointed out to him, rushed forward, and knelt at his feet.

"Did your father send you hither?" asked the general.
"No, senor, he did not."
"And how dare you, then—"
"My father has done nothing to deserve death," answered the lad. "He is a prisoner of war."

a prisoner of war."

"Ha! Who taught you to question my justice? Answer me, presuming youngster."

"No one, senor, but brave generals do not always kill their prisoners."

"I kill whom I choose!" thundered Morillo: "and I hate the French. Boy, your father shall die! I have said it; begone from my sight!"

The officer made a silent sign to the petitioner, to intimate there was no hope, and he must be gone. But the hoj's countenance suddenly changed. He walked up to the general, who had turned away, and placed himself directly before him, with a look of calm resolution worthy of a martyr.

"Hear me, senor." said he: "my father is gray-haired; he is wounded; his strength is failing even now, though he stands up to receive the fire of your men. I am young and strong and well. Let them shoot me in his place and let my father go free."

It was impossible to doubt the sincerity of this offer, for the face of the devoted son was kindled with a holy entusiasm. A dark flush rushed to the brow of Morillo, and for a moment he looked on the boy in silence.

"You are willing to die," at length he geid, "for your father. Then to suffer pain for him will be nothing. Will you lose one of your ears to save him?"

"I will," was the firm reply.

"Lend me your sword, Pabla," and in an instant, at one blow, this inhuman Spaniard struck off the brave boy's car. The victim wept, but resisted not; nor raised his hand to whee away the blood.

"So far good; will you lose the other car?"

"I will," was the firm reply.

"I he heroism of this child compelled his admiration; but unmoved from his cruel purpose he, smote off the other car with his still recking sword.

"And now, senor." said the boy breathing quickly and looking up into the general's face.

"And now," answered Morillo, "depart. "The father of such a child is langerous to Spania; he must pay the forfeit of his life."

The maimed child went forth from the presence of this brutal monster. Preselly the report of firearms announced that he had witnessed the execution of his father.

that he had witnessed the value his father.

CHICAGO—May wheat to-day at $1 11½, the highest point for that delivery reached during the long Leiter campaign. War news and enormous sales of cash wheat caused a sharp advance in July also, but this was lost under heavy realizing and July closed unchanged. The market was a spasmodic one. Corn left off at ½½½c advance. Oats closed unchanged. Provisions show declines of 5 to 12½c.

The wheat market was in many respects a narrow one. Although a tremendous business was done, most of the activity was crowded into the half hours immediately following the opening and preceding the close. But in those brief periods enormous lines of wheat changed hands. The opening was very strong all around, May again being especially prominent. The continued gravity of the news from Washington was at all times a factor. But traders were for the most part influenced by the sharp advance which took place at Liverpool, futures in that market showing 1½@2d advances carly and increasing them later in the day. This was apparently

There was professional buying of stocks to-day which gave the market a firm tone all day. The extreme advance from the low level at the opening was a point or over in most of the leading stocks, but the not gains are less than a point, except in a few cases. The professional buying was more or less influenced by the very ostentatious espousal of the bull side by a large and daring operator, in published utterances and by distribution of buying orders. The following thus invited was sufficient to effect an advance in prices in a futures in that market showing 14,@2d advances early and increasing them later in the day. This was apparently due to apprehension of hostilities between the United States and Spain. Another result of this apprehension, and one which had a great effect on trading here, was the acceptance by foreigners of everything in the market. Heavy sales of wheat for export yesterday by Leiter were continued to-day, he having disposed of over 1,500,000 bushels over night. The effect on opening prices here was marked. May, very narrow market, in spite of the de-pressed sentiment reported from for-eign exchanges. This depression was reflected at the opening here, but was soon overcome by the bull movement. The bears seemed to be very active on London exchange, especially in Span-ish fours and the fact that they were forced to ever helped the bulls in New ish fours and the fact that they were forced to cover helped the bulls in New York in the later dealings.

The bull movement is based on the argument that a protracted delay in the senate over the intervention resolution is likely and that if the senate resolution is likely and that if the senate resolution is adopted there will be further delay in the conference. Th President is credited with having expressed his preference for the house resolution and the bulls professed to believe that if the senate resolutions were sent to him it would professed to believe that if the senate resolutions were sent to him it would fail of approval. All of these possible complications are accepted as furthering the chance of delay and delay to the minds of the bulls means additional chance for peaceful settlement. One of the possible plans of settlement suggested by the bull party was the sale of the island of Cuba after the meeting of the Spanish cortes. A large part of the day's activity was centered in Sugar, the grangers and Union Pacific preferred. Prices fell from the highest in the last hour on the report that the Spanish minister was preparing to leave Washington.

nour on the report that the Spanish inflister was preparing to leave Washington.

Tobacco fluctuated violently, but advanced at one time 9 points. The keen borrowing demand for the clock indicated acute distress on the part of the shorts against whom the movement was designed. Rates for call money eased off to 2 per cent this afternoon and only $55,000 of gold was engaged for import. The rise of London exchange in Paris and Berlin in response to the stiffening of the London discount rate was followed to-day by lower rates for continental exchange in New York, indicating that the presure for gold is being shifted from London to the continent. The demand for cash by interior banks to strengthen their reserves against the contingency of war continues unabated and the supply of legal tenders has become so depleted that New York banks are likely to offer gold to supply the interior demand if it shall continue.

Business in the bond market was confined to a few speculative issues and prices show not declines. There was a sale of a block of $110,000 of Union Pacific 4s at 90, the low point.

Total sales $1,25,000.
United States 2s and the old 4s coupon declined 1 per cent, the old 4s registered and the new 4s ½ per cent and the 5s ½ per cent cach in the bid price.

figures Leiter supplied everybody who wanted wheat and the result was a reaction to $1 10 and later to $1 09, but no indication of weakness was shown. The bulk of the trading, however, was done in July and great nervousness was shown among traders in that delivery. Opening prices ranged from $9@89%c, an advance of 14@1%c over yesterday, the influences governing May being the factors in July also. For half an hour trading was extremely heavy, shorts, frightened at the recent rapid advance and the character of the news, taking everything in sight. But long wheat which has been accumulating came in the market in immense quantities, holders being satisfied with their profits, and under this liquidation the price was lammered down to $84c. It worked back egain under a gradually decreasing trade to $94@89%c, but there was evidently plenty of wheat on tap at around $9c, and the price soon got under that figure. For about two hours the price swung back and forth, now above $9c, then below it, but with the tendency in the main toward a lower level. figures Leiter supplied everybody who price swing once and forth, now above Sec, then below it, but with the ten-dency in the main toward a lower level, as the short interest became eliminated. Short selling in expectation of a good reaction finally started, and half an hour from the close the selling movement had become general, many of the early buyers offering their lines. The hour from the close the selling movement had become general, many of the early buyers offering their lines. The result was a decidedly weak market for a short time, not only the early advance being lost, but a full cent besides. It looked as if the market would wind un with the advantage with the bears, but shortly before the close Leiter brokers started to built the May price. They were eminently successful and a new season's high mark, $111\frac{1}{2}$, was established. This strength in May was quickly reflected in July Liquidation stopped and shorts extensively covered again, July from $7\frac{1}{2}$c, to which figure it had declined, it radied to and closed steady at $7\frac{1}{2}$c. May wound up at $111\frac{1}{2}$.

Corn early was active and firm, the advance in wheat and higher cables bringing large buying orders into the market. Extensive and general selling ensued and the market became comparatively weak, remaining in that condition until late in the day, when the large export business and the final rally in wheat stendled the price. May ranged from 30\frac{1}{2}$ to 30\frac{1}{2}$ 620\frac{1}{2}$ c, where the large export business and the final rally in wheat stendled the price. May ranged from 30\frac{1}{2}$ to 30\frac{1}{2}$ 620\frac{1}{2}$ c, and closed wheat and corn. Early prices were sympathetically higher with good covering by shorts. Prices soon sagged under realizing and railled again with the latest strength in other grain markets. Business as a whole was quite large. Provisions was the one really weak market on the floor. Prices were lower from the start, and the market and time showed any strength.
